

A.G. Reed
2007 Summer Intern

Foundation for Research on FREE
Economics & the Environment

July 24, 2007

To Whom it May Concern:

So far my quest for knowledge has taken me to Colorado, Michigan, England, and now Bozeman, Montana. The last is perhaps the most beautiful! FREE's summer internship program is a fantastic educational opportunity. I am learning a great deal about two topics that interest me deeply—economics and the environment. The summer conference series, the weekly seminars, and the day-to-day interaction with accomplished persons, such as FREE's summer scholar in residence, Steve Eagle; John Baden, whom, I am sure, many of you know; and too many others to name here has afforded me a fantastic chance to meet people and to study.

I have been asked more than once how I came to find FREE's summer internship program and I have realized that I do not remember where or how I came across their webpage. It is no wonder that I often find myself using the word 'serendipitous' when answering such questions! The location, people, resources, and topics of FREE are a perfect fit for me.

Sincerely,
A.G. Reed